Congratulations to Dr Kevin Hung, the Awardee of the Hong Kong Humanity Award 2021

Dr Hung is currently the Assistant Professor in Emergency Medicine, Chinese University of Hong Kong, and the Deputy Director, Collaborating Centre for Oxford University and CUHK for Disaster and Medical Humanitarian Response (CCOUC). He is also the Council member of Hong Kong College of Emergency Medicine and the Editor-in-Chief of Hong Kong Journal of Emergency Medicine.

Kevin had travelled to different countries and regions multiple times, including the Mainland China, the Philippines, and Tanzania in Africa to participate in emergency relief operations in disaster-stricken places. He assisted in developing local medical projects and training medical staff.

He actively engages in research and education related to disaster preparedness as well as public health, etc. He is committed to reducing negative impacts brought by disasters in affected areas. "To truly help those affected by disasters, we must first understand their situation and needs.

Natural hazards are inevitable, but Kevin believes that everyone can make more adequate preparations for disasters. "Every overseas humanitarian relief mission is a precious experience. I hope to bring my accumulated experience back to Hong Kong through disaster research and teaching to improve the level of disaster preparedness of local citizens."
